An Independent Line to New York

RAILROAD PLANS AND REMOVS

The Philadelphia Public says: "There is something very important about the intention to the effect of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to build a new line from Philadelphia to New York, Robert Garrett, the third vice president of the company and its active spirit. In the absence of his father in Europe, was in Philadelphia yesterday in conference with President of the Pennsylvania railroad, on the subject of the new independent railroad, on the subject. They were together in the morning and understood that the conference was in reference to the proposed connection can be formed with the Reading railroad, and the new line to the three-mile junction road. As the Baltimore and Ohio line is a very little for the passenger business from either New York or Philadelphia, but is most interested in the ern freight the Baltimore and Ohio people think they can counterbalance this by the fact that the Baltimore and Ohio has a great deal of the Baltimore and Ohio company in its own hands, and that it is in a position to compete for the tremendous freight business of the Baltimore and Ohio with the west and south. Their design, it is asserted, should they fail to get into Philadelphia, is to have freight received by the railroad in the city and taken out to the junction of the road which they propose to build. In stock, the Baltimore and Ohio is now substantially the same as the Delaware Western railroad and its claim to the Delaware Western railroad and its claim to the Delaware Western railroad. From Wilmington comes the definite statement that the Baltimore and Ohio is the principal owner of the Delaware Western road, and that it has a 500 shares to Mr. Garrett, who agrees, it is asserted, that this road will build the line to the Delaware Western railroad.

Wm. C. H. Garrett is also credited with the discovery of the bones. The site formerly held by Bixel & Co., R. H. Robinson & Co. and Elliott, Johnson & Co., two of the largest firms in the city, was the Delaware Western stock they can get for Co. McComb. It is also said that a formal investigation was made by the city council yesterday to the Baltimore & Ohio company, through its counsel in Wilmington, leaving no doubt that the bones were not theirs. Others were out at Klameus yesterday, making surveys, strengthening the belief that the Baltimore & Ohio stock was not theirs. Garrett came in a cab direct from the depot, and after his interview with Mr. Cowen received the following letter:

WARRING.—The previous analysis of the note of warning in which he HARRIED some letters showed fixed habit of hand and other letters indicated a disguised hand. The original specimen of the note was No. 17, and was written by the attorney, and ex-Governor Chamberlain, in reviewing Mr. Southworth's previous testimony, cited the expert's analysis of No. 17, and his previous conclusion that the person who wrote No. 17, also wrote the note of warning. Mr. Southworth said that he was not in a position to regard No. 27; he was not in a physical condition to make a report.

A CROOK WILL CASE.—The orphans' court was engaged in a rather curious case yesterday, it being the case of THE CROOK WILL, and whether a renunciation of the provisions of a will could be withdrawn after having been accepted.
